

UNITED STATES COMMISSION ON INTERNATIONAL RELIGIOUS FREEDOM

Solicitation Number: USCIRF RFQ25001
Updating Research on Official Textbooks in Egypt, Pakistan, Saudi Arabia, and/or Turkey

I. OBJECTIVE

Public school textbooks in some countries instruct students about religion or religious communities in ways that negatively affect religious freedom conditions for certain groups, typically those outside the official or majority religion or interpretation of that religion. By bolstering discriminatory laws and policies and sending an official indication that some groups are disfavored, problematic content in government textbooks contributes to a permissive climate for state and societal abuses of the religious freedom of members of such groups. In prior research, USCIRF has documented problematic content in official textbooks in Egypt, Pakistan, Saudi Arabia, and Turkey, including content that may promote hatred, discrimination, or violence against religious minorities. USCIRF's research also has examined the extent to which governments have made and implemented commitments to reform textbooks in response to concerns about this content. USCIRF is calling for research proposals to bring USCIRF's past reporting up to date. The contracted research will entail reviewing the current versions of previously reviewed textbooks, analyzing their content, identifying problematic and/or reformed passages, and contextualizing these passages in terms of broader religious freedom conditions in the country. Proposals may include one or more of the countries whose textbooks USCIRF previously studied.

II. BACKGROUND

The U.S. Commission on International Religious Freedom ("USCIRF" or "Commission") is an independent, bipartisan U.S. federal government commission created by the 1998 International Religious Freedom Act (IRFA). USCIRF is separate from the U.S. Department of State.

USCIRF is statutorily mandated to (1) monitor and review the facts and circumstances of religious freedom abroad; (2) make policy recommendations to the President, the Secretary of State and the Congress regarding international religious freedom; and (3) evaluate U.S. policies in response to violations of and progress towards religious freedom in foreign countries. Further, USCIRF is mandated to evaluate the potential effects of its policy recommendations on religious communities and individuals whose rights have been violated.

Inherent in religious freedom is the right to believe or not believe as one's conscience leads, and live out one's beliefs openly, peacefully, and without fear. Freedom of religion or belief is an expansive right that includes the freedoms of thought, conscience, expression, association, and assembly. Religious freedom is a core human right recognized by international law and treaty; a necessary component of U.S. foreign policy and America's commitment to defending democracy and freedom globally; and a vital element of national security, critical to ensuring a more peaceful, prosperous, and stable world.
